

What are the Eligibility Requirements?

Income: The income limit you must meet depends on whether there is anyone elderly or disabled in your household, or any children. Both Earned Income and Unearned Income count toward the limit. Earned Income includes wages, salaries and tips from employment, and profit from self-employment. Unearned Income includes payments such as SSI/SSA, child support and alimony, VA benefits, pension and other retirement payments, etc.

Income Deductions: Certain expenses are deducted from your income, including dependent care expenses, rent or mortgage, utility payments, child support payments, and medical expenses for elderly or disabled people.

Resources: Some households also have a resource limit. Countable resources include liquid assets like bank accounts, stocks and bonds, and some vehicles.

Work Requirements

General Requirements: SNAP recipients ages 16-59 must meet work requirements. See BFA Form 213, SNAP Work Requirements, for more information.

Able-Bodied Adults Without Dependents (ABAWD): Adults ages 18-52 without children in the home have special work requirements. See BFA Form 216, Are You an ABAWD?, or ask your Family Services Specialist for more information.

SNAP Employment & Training Program: SNAP E&T is a voluntary program available for SNAP recipients, which helps with resume review and preparation, job search training, and case management to help you overcome any obstacles preventing you from finding gainful employment.

What is SNAP?

The Supplemental Nutrition Assistance Program (SNAP) helps eligible low-income households supplement their food budgets so they can purchase food. The program serves children, seniors, people with disabilities, and working or unemployed people of all ages. Monthly SNAP benefits depend on several factors, including income, expenses, and household size. SNAP benefits are placed onto an EBT card each month, which can be used to purchase food items, including plants and seeds, at authorized SNAP retailers and farmers markets.
